Spring has officially arrived in New York City, bringing warmer weather, seasonal blooms, and plenty of activity to Central Park. Whether you are looking to attend a free event, take up a new sport, or go for a quiet stroll, the Spring Guide has all you need to know about this season’s happenings in the Park.

The Conservancy’s mission is to restore, manage, and enhance Central Park in partnership with the public. We raise 75% of the Park’s annual budget from private resources and are responsible for all of the essential work that keeps Central Park beautiful.

SPRING BLOOMS IN CENTRAL PARK

Every spring the blooms of Central Park bring bursts of color to the concrete jungle of New York City. With hundreds of different flower varieties throughout the Park, it’s hard to pick a favorite, but here are a few that keep visitors coming back year after year:

Kwanzan Cherry
Botanical Name: Prunus serrulata
Plant Type: Tree
Typical Bloom Time: April to May
Where to see: Reservoir West

The Kwanzan cherry first arrived in America in 1912. Today, more than 150 of these popular cherry trees can be found in Central Park. For visitors, walking the paths beneath a canopy of their bright pink blooms can be a spiritual experience.

Saucer Magnolia
Botanical Name: Magnolia x soulangeana
Plant Type: Tree
Typical Bloom Time: March to April
Where to see it: Conservatory Garden, Obelisk, Great Lawn, Maine Monument, Metropolitan Landscapes

The saucer magnolia features large flowers that bloom in various shades of white, pink, and maroon, emerging dramatically on the bare branches of the tree in early spring. Its leaves are shiny, dark-green, and oval-shaped.

Crabapple
Botanical Name: Malus spp.
Plant Type: Tree
Typical Bloom Time: Mid-April to Mid-May
Where to see it: Conservatory Garden, Great Lawn East

With bright spring blossoms, a wonderful fragrance, and summer crabapples (which are eaten by the Park’s wildlife), these trees are a springtime staple in Conservatory Garden, where they are the main feature in the two allées that border the central garden.

Visit our Bloom Guide at centralparknyc.org/bloomguide to learn more about Central Park’s spring flowers.

We’ll be tracking the spring blooms on social media all season long. Share your spring photos with us at @centralparknyc for a chance to be featured!

CONSERVATORY GARDEN

Central Park’s formal six-acre garden is divided into three smaller gardens, each with a distinct style: the northern, French-style garden; the center, Italianate garden; and the southern, English-style garden.

What to expect this season: More than 45,000 bulbs were planted last fall in preparation for spring, with the earliest blooms expected to show in late March, and mid- and late bloomers continuing through May. Ten thousand daffodils and an equal number of tulips will bloom in the north garden alone. Conservatory Garden is open daily and is a designated quiet zone. Visit centralparknyc.org/conservatorygarden to learn more.

SHAKESPEARE GARDEN

Dedicated to the memory of William Shakespeare in 1916, Shakespeare Garden is designed to resemble the Bard’s native English countryside. The flowerbeds showcase a diverse array of plants, along with plaques featuring quotes that reference the flowers from Shakespeare’s writings.

What to expect this season: Every year, visitors come out to Shakespeare Garden before the official arrival of spring in order to catch early blooming flowers (snowdrops and winter aconite are a pre-season favorite). Last fall, Conservancy staff and volunteers planted 14,000 bulbs in preparation for spring, including Rock Garden Iris, Crocus, and more than 50 varieties of tulips. Visit centralparknyc.org/shakespeare for more information.

KEEPING IT GREEN FOR FAMILIES
Spend quality time with your family by helping to keep Central Park green by spreading mulch or raking leaves. The Conservancy’s environmental educators lead stewardship projects throughout the Park during spring and fall.

Families only, maximum of 3 children per parent/guardian; no groups. Ages 5+. Space is limited; advance registration required. Registration begins Monday, May 1. Visit centralparknyc.org/keepingitgreen for updates and more information.

YOUTH PROGRAMS

YOUTH BASKETBALL CLINICS
Young athletes can enhance their basketball skills through small group instruction and competitive games in this high-energy, interactive clinic. Designed to help players of all levels develop both on the court and off, these clinics focus on skill development, team play, and sportsmanship. Ages 5 – 16; open to players of all abilities. Visit centralparknyc.org/basketballclinic to register.

SUMMER INTERNSHIP: HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS
Our full-time, paid internship offers high school students the opportunity to help care for Central Park while also contributing to New York City’s overall health and vibrancy. Interns are paired with mentors in horticulture, visitor services, and public programs for seven weeks over the Park’s busiest season, and come together every Friday for group activities or projects at other parks or environmental organizations.

Acceptance is through a competitive application process. Students ages 16+ are eligible to apply (applicants must be at least 16 years old by June 15). Preference is given to students who have participated in the ROOTS or Visitor Experience Apprentice Programs. Interns work five days per week with schedules varying depending on the position (some include weekends). Visit programapps.centralparknyc.org to apply.

July – August
Application Deadline: April 30

ROOTS (Restoration of the Outdoors Organized by Teen Students)
The ROOTS program gives high school students the opportunity to complete a semester-long ecological restoration and management project in the woodlands, and then use those skills to contribute to a restoration project outside Central Park. Projects include maintaining rustic trails, removing invasive plants, and cultivating new plantings.

Participants build their network of like-minded teens while contributing to larger urban stewardship efforts. Acceptance is through a competitive application process. Grades 9 – 12. Successful completion of the ROOTS program gives applicants priority status for our summer internship program. Visit programapps.centralparknyc.org to apply.

Saturdays, October – November
10:00 am – 1:00 pm
Application Available: June 9
Application Deadline: September 15
