Central Park Conservancy

1996 Annual Report

All that we do in Central Park is driven by people: the people who work to maintain and preserve the restored Park, the people who support their work, and, very importantly, the people who use the Park.

Central Park's Restoration

If Central Park's 19th century creators, Frederick Law Olmsted and Calvert Vaux, had traveled through time to the Park in the late 1970s, no doubt they would have been dismayed by its woeful condition—many of its landscapes nearly barren, and its buildings and monuments marred by graffiti and the neglect of time. In 1980, as New York City struggled to achieve fiscal balance and meet the essential needs of all of its citizens, one citizen—Elizabeth Barlow Rogers, joined by others concerned for Central Park's deterioration—founded the Central Park Conservancy. Over a 16-year period, the ranks of this small but determined group of founders grew as others helped convince thousands of New Yorkers to commit their energy and financial support to restoring their beloved Central Park.

Betsy's vision of a restored Central Park took a dramatic move forward when, in 1994, Founding Trustee Richard Gilder challenged the City of New York and his fellow New Yorkers to match his extraordinary gift of $17 million to restore remaining major Park landscapes. The City of New York accepted the challenge, as did the Conservancy. And 1996 saw the successful conclusion of the Wonder of New York campaign, which matched the Gilder Challenge and raised an additional $26.2 million in operating support and endowment. In 1996, with much of the Park restored and her vision nearing realization, Betsy Barlow Rogers stepped down as Conservancy President and Central Park Administrator to help revitalize other areas of New York City.

Central Park's designers would be proud indeed of the Conservancy's success in restoring the Park to the splendor they envisioned. They would applaud the Conservancy's commitment to preserve and manage the Park in partnership with the City, and further, to make all Park visitors their partners in maintaining the Park. Considered by many to be the heart of New York City, Central Park is once again lush and green, its buildings and monuments restored, and most of its playgrounds renewed for young visitors. Central Park is rapidly returning to its rightful place as an 843-acre urban refuge where visitors can play, reflect, relax, and learn about nature.

“This is a watershed moment for Central Park, and for the public-private partnership that sustains it. With the landscapes restored, the Conservancy and the City must work together even more closely to preserve and protect what we have accomplished.”

Karen H. Putnam

Conservancy in Transition

The successful conclusion of the Wonder of New York campaign accelerated the evolution of the Conservancy's mission, moving it from an emphasis on restoration and setting it firmly on its course of preserving the enormous investment the Conservancy, the City of New York, and tens of thousands of New Yorkers have made in Central Park.

When Karen Putnam took office in January 1996 as Conservancy President and Central Park Administrator, she launched management, public program, and communications initiatives to help the Conservancy prepare for its new era of managing the restored Park and supporting the increased maintenance the Park will require over the longer term.

With full implementation of the zone management system underway, the Conservancy was positioned to provide necessary operations, horticultural, and education services, and, increasingly, to make all visitors its partners in maintaining Central Park as a place for the enjoyment of leisure, recreation, and the appreciation of nature. The concept of stewardship was embedded in every management initiative and in every public program. Zone gardeners daily reinforced for visitors the delicate balance between how they use the Park and how the Park survives for future visitors. Public programs provided families and school groups with positive experiences that encouraged them to work with us to preserve Central Park.

The Conservancy also integrated more formally into its preservation and management operations the invaluable work of its loyal and growing cadre of 1,260 volunteers, who give 35,000 hours of their time each year. Volunteers helped zone gardeners maintain their landscapes and educate Park visitors. Volunteers also keep the public informed of restoration projects, public programs, and membership opportunities as they disseminated materials from new information carts on the Great Lawn or from kiosks at key Park entrances.

Administering the restored Park and developing a corps of Park stewards will require an ever-expanded base of support. Toward this end, the Conservancy, with considerable pro bono assistance from DDB Needham Worldwide Communications Group Inc., began increasing marketing and media outreach to attract new members and sponsors for Conservancy projects. Those initiatives will come to fruition in Fiscal Year 1997.

As the Conservancy works to expand its base of support, it is important to remember the deep and solid foundation upon which the Conservancy is building: its Trustees, a tireless and outstandingly successful Women's Committee, and loyal members and civic advocates. Together this year, they raised or matched millions of dollars for Central Park at the Blue Moon Gala, the Frederick Law Olmsted Awards Luncheon, and the Asprey Sunflower Spring Celebration, which is designed to attract younger Park users as donors. The Women's Committee expanded and invigorated the Adopt-a-Bench and Tree Trust programs. The Conservancy greatly appreciates the support that individuals involved in Playground Partners, the Perimeter Association, Upper Park Partners, and the Adopt-an-Acre program bring to improving Central Park.

These dedicated New Yorkers, the Conservancy's excellent professional staff, and the new friends it seeks are the forces that will drive the Conservancy's mission to provide coming generations of New Yorkers a beautiful and durable Central Park.

To inspire future Park stewards, the Conservancy expanded art and nature weekend programs at The Charles A. Dana Discovery Center in the Upper Park, emphasizing the importance to New York City of the Park's woodlands, lakes and ponds, and wildlife. Innovative science and nature exploration programs attracted many young visitors to the new Henry Luce Nature Observatory in the heart of the Park. Combined with fitness and team-building challenge courses offered at the North Meadow Recreation Center, and with outdoor science classes for the City's schools, Conservancy programs invited all visitors to enjoy Central Park and work with us to preserve it.

Wonder of New York Campaign

June 1996 marked the successful conclusion of the three-year, $71.5 million Wonder of New York campaign. The overwhelming support of thousands of New Yorkers and many corporations and foundations enabled the Conservancy to exceed its goal by approximately $5.7 million, raising nearly $77.2 million.

Funds will provide for completing the Park's major landscape restoration by 2000, and will enhance an endowment fund to prepare the Park for the new millennium.

In the past year, a variety of restoration projects were begun or completed—from the Great Lawn to the Sixth Avenue Entrance, and from Summit Rock at West 85th Street to Merchants' Gate at Columbus Circle. Park visitors now enjoy newly planted landscapes, improved pathways, and new benches and other amenities throughout the Park's west side.

The Conservancy embarked on its single most ambitious landscape restoration and the centerpiece of the campaign in October 1995—the 55 acres including and surrounding the Great Lawn. This $18.2 million reconstruction will be completed in Fall 1997, with state-of-the-art ballfields, a revitalized and enlarged Turtle Pond, new volleyball and basketball courts, and new pathways, benches, lighting, drinking fountains, sitting areas, and native plantings. Under the leadership of Campaign Chairman Daniel P. Tully, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Merrill Lynch & Co., Inc., 30 corporations and individuals primarily from the financial services community contributed funds toward the restoration.

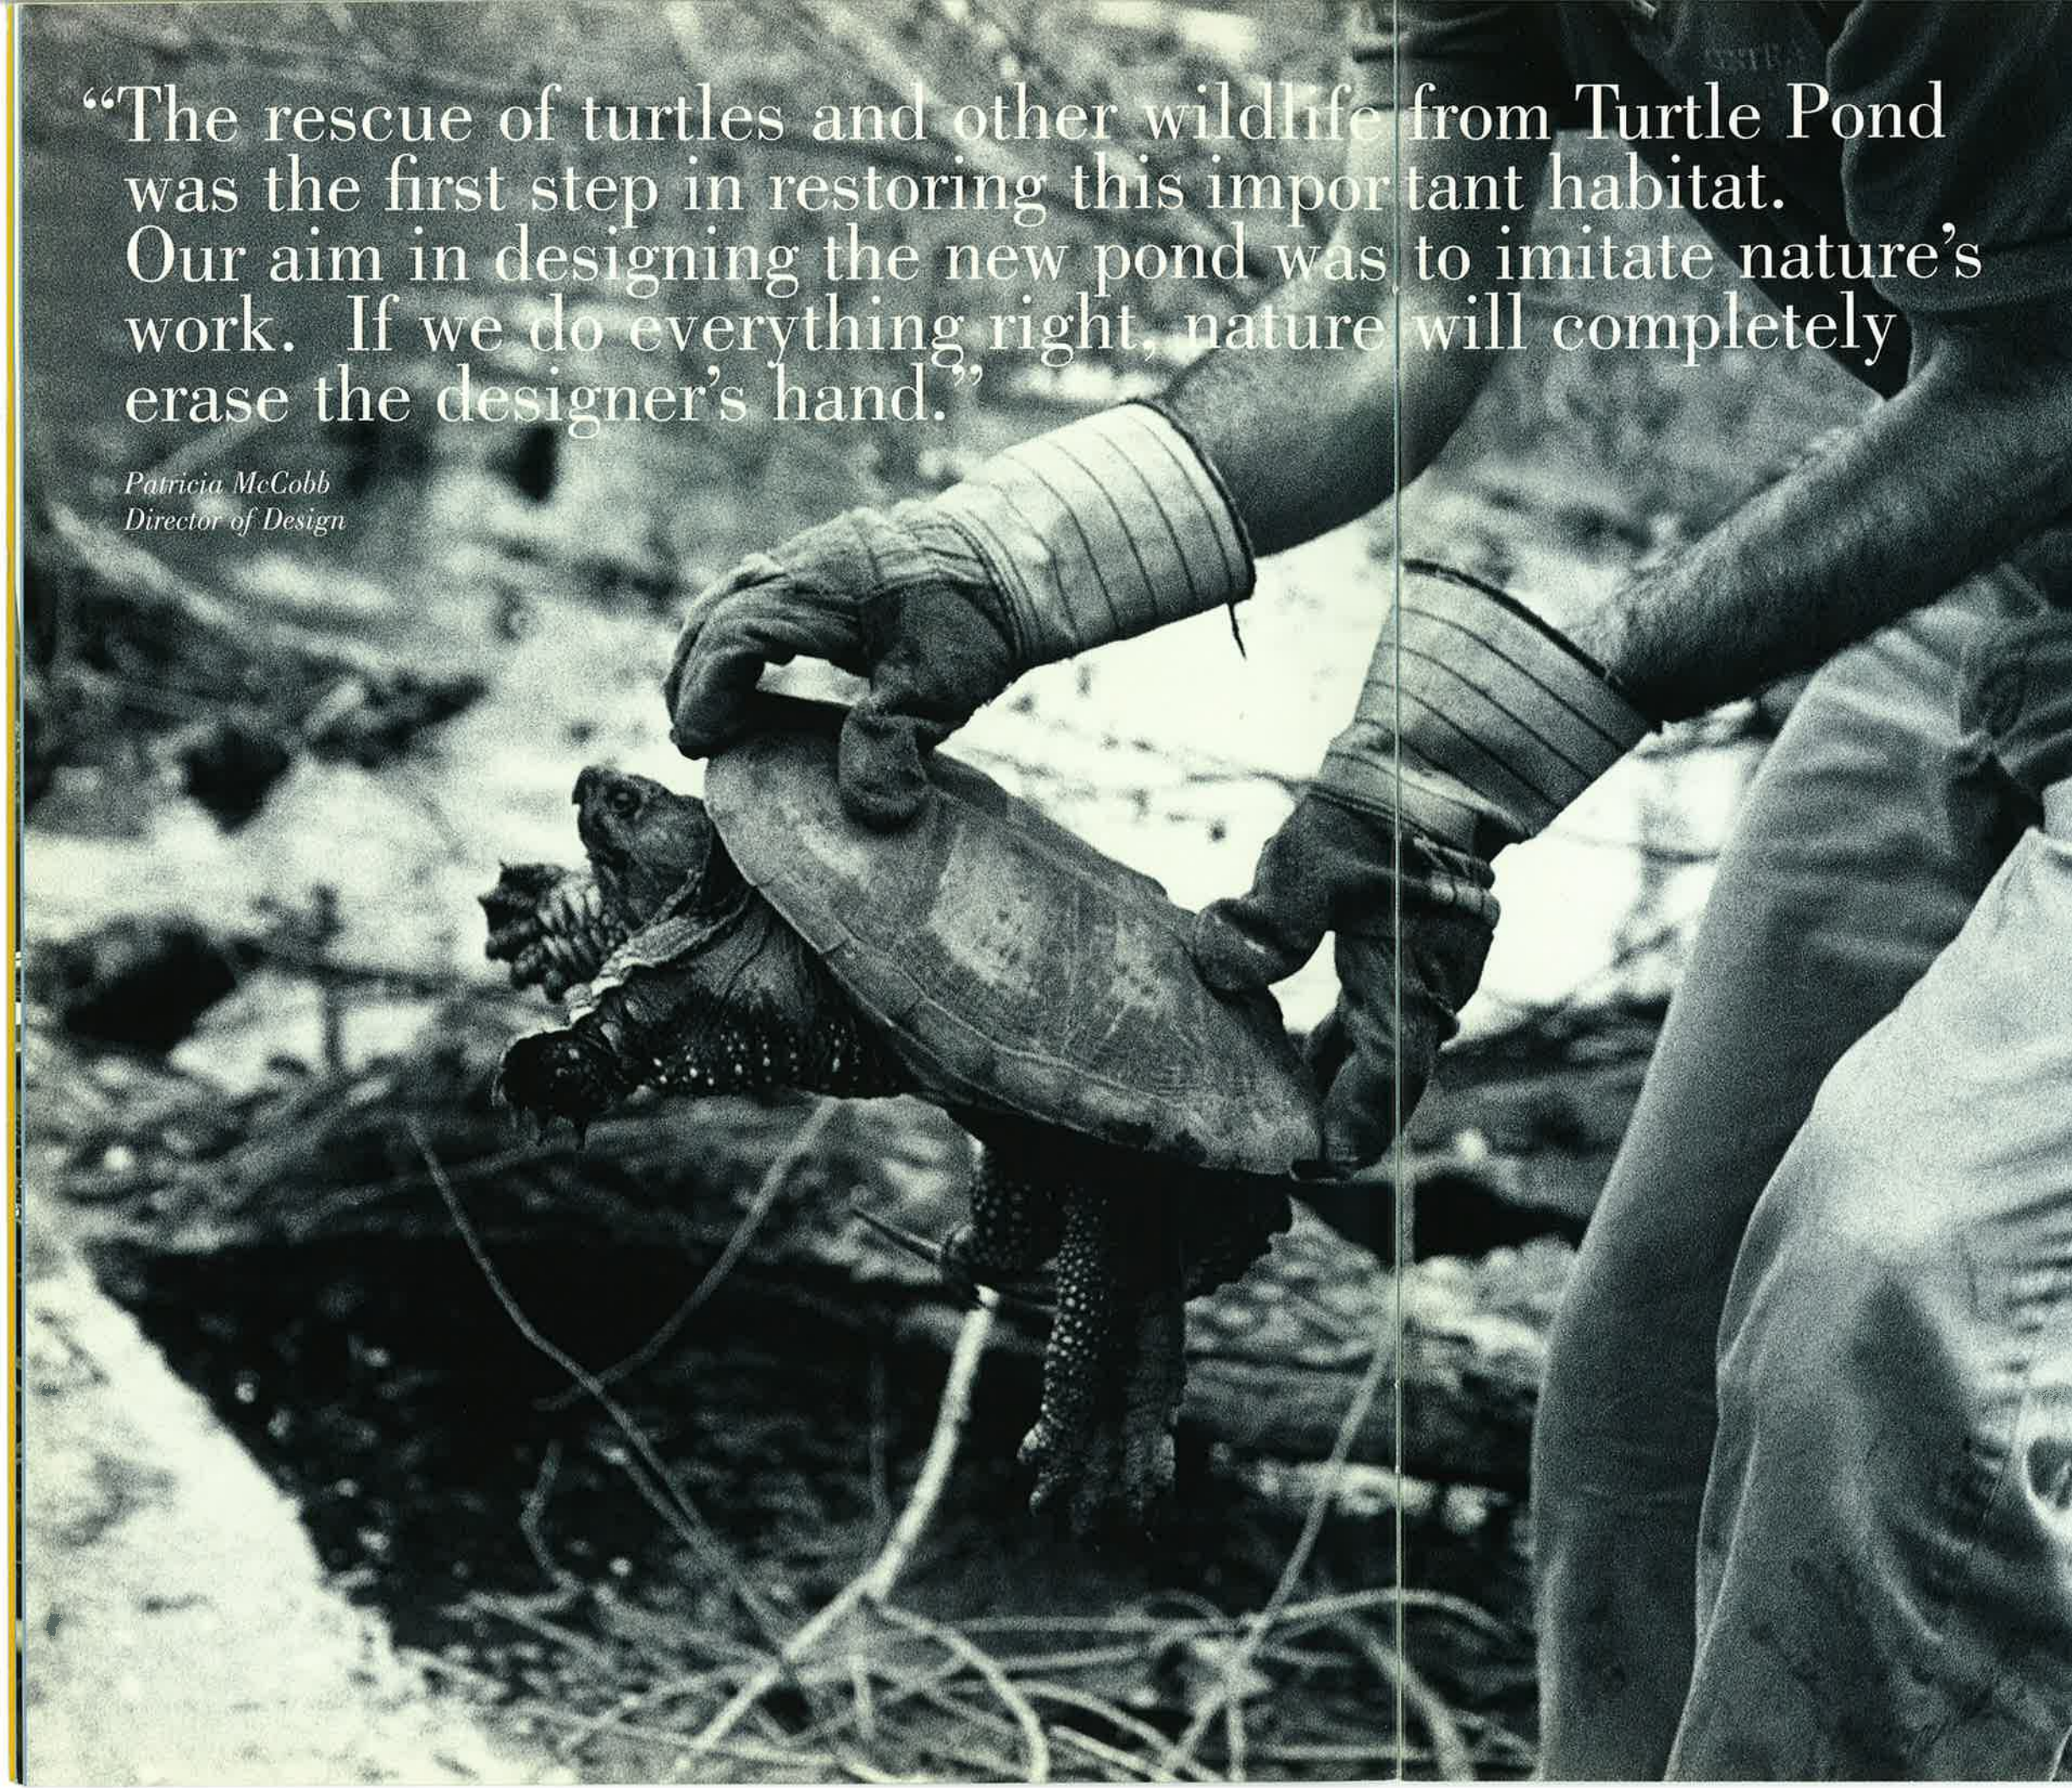

This year, the Conservancy completed the largest piece of the project: new infrastructure to solve problems caused by faulty storm drainage and by water retained by the Lower Croton Reservoir, which existed on the site until the 1930s and whose walls still remain beneath the Great Lawn. New Yorkers had a rare glimpse of a piece of the City's history when crews unearthed a section of the old reservoir while constructing the new system.

Ursula Hoskins holds a map of the Lower Croton Reservoir, which is now the site of the Great Lawn.

“Uncovering a structure which predates the Park afforded a unique opportunity to glimpse firsthand the history of New York when it was a young, growing city.”

Ursula Dean Hoskins
Project Manager

“The rescue of turtles and other wildlife from Turtle Pond was the first step in restoring this important habitat. Our aim in designing the new pond was to imitate nature’s work. If we do everything right, nature will completely erase the designer’s hand.”

*Patricia McCobb
Director of Design*

Wonder of New York Campaign

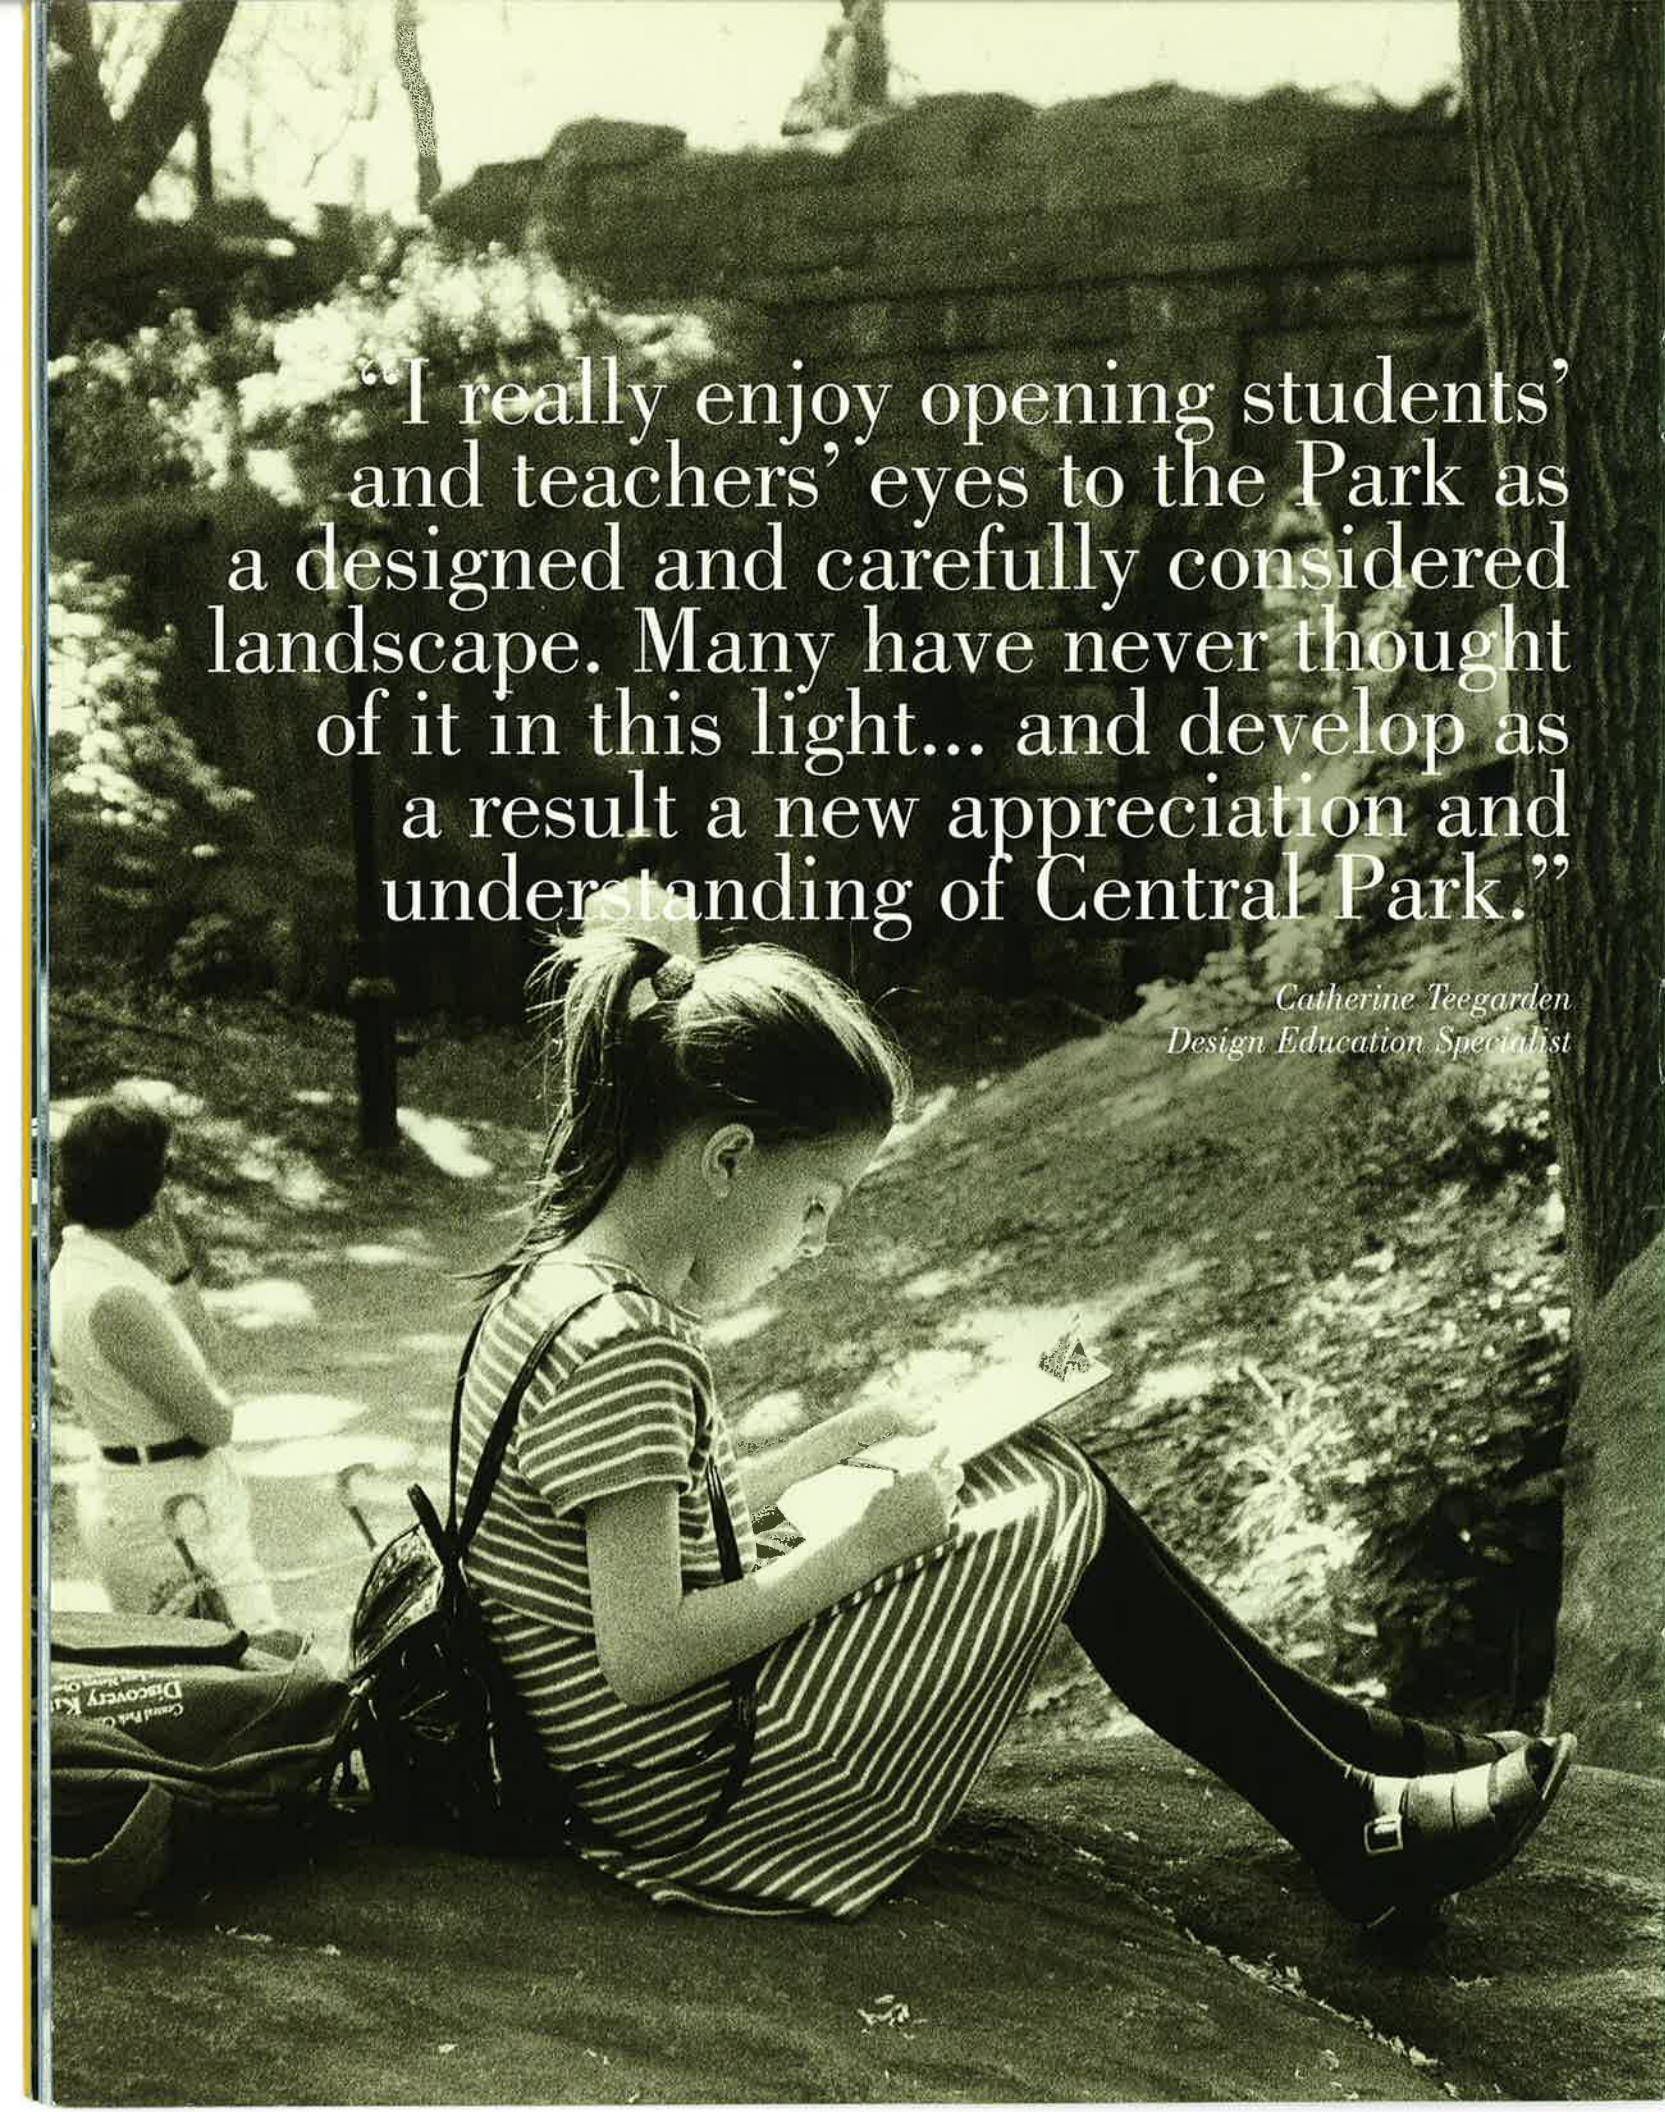

In April, a dramatic aquatic wildlife rescue signaled the start of work at Turtle Pond. Conservancy crews and wildlife experts rounded up Eastern-painted and musk turtles, and relocated a 44-pound snapping turtle to the Lake. Crayfish and pumpkinseed fish also were moved to new habitats. The restored Turtle Pond, which will reopen with the Great Lawn, will feature a new naturalistic shoreline, an island for wildlife, and a wooden dock and nature blind. School groups and families visiting the Henry Luce Nature Observatory will make use of the dock, the first in Central Park, to study the pond’s natural habitats.

To ensure that the Great Lawn remains green and lush for many years to come, the Conservancy kicked off the Diamond in the Rough campaign to create an endowment fund by providing an opportunity to adopt Great Lawn ballfields, basketball and volleyball courts, and a running track. This mini-campaign was successfully launched with gifts from Life Trustee Henry R. Kravis of Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co., and from the Samuel and May Rudin Foundation, Inc., and Trustee Eric C. Rudin.

As earth movers and back-hoes rolled on and off the Great Lawn, a number of restorations were completed in other areas of the Park—particularly on the west and south sides. The Conservancy transformed Summit Rock at West 85th Street, the highest natural point in the Park, into a picturesque rocky overlook. Crews removed concrete paving to create a naturalistic amphitheatre with stone seating walls, rugged stone steps and terraces, and a variety of native plantings, including red maples, dogwoods, and magnolias.

Further south from West 77th to West 81st Street, crews are completing Naturalists’ Walk, a nature education landscape generously funded by Pamela and Stanley Chais. Starting at a new pedestrian entrance across from the American Museum of Natural History, the walk will contain a series of stops on the Park’s natural history, including: rock outcroppings dating back millions of years that highlight the Park’s geologic history; a stream and ravine that provide a haven for wildlife, especially birds, with a rustic wooden footbridge, a stepping-stone path to the water’s edge, and native grasses, perennials, and berried shrubs; and a woodland area that contains a variety of native species of trees.

From W. 74th to W. 77th Street, a generous gift from the Jean and Albert Nerken Foundation funded Azalea Walk, a beautiful landscape along the slopes south of Eaglevale Bridge that features an array of colorful azaleas, rhododendrons, and other native flora. The Chase Manhattan Corporation funded the restoration of the W. 67th Street Landscape, an area that traditionally serves as the New York City Marathon and the Chase Corporate Challenge finish lines. The landscape features handsome granite block paving along the Drive and pedestrian entrance to accommodate larger crowds, as well as restored lawns and pedestrian paths.

Strengthening Ties with the Community

When we learn about Central Park—its history, its wildlife, its flora—we feel connected to it. The Conservancy's public programs—education programs for students and teachers, art and nature workshops for families, fitness programs for neighborhood youth and community groups, and collaborations with the diverse communities and cultural institutions bordering the Park—invite the public into the Park to learn more about its natural and built environments and about how its well-being depends on thoughtful use.

The Conservancy opened the Henry Luce Nature Observatory at Belvedere Castle in May 1996. The centerpiece of a $1.3 million, five-year matching grant from The Henry Luce Foundation, the Nature Observatory features colorful, hands-on exhibits on the rich variety of animals and plants that exist in Central Park. With a focus on nearby Turtle Pond and the Ramble, a renowned woodland bird habitat, the Nature Observatory is designed to encourage visitors to experience nature firsthand. Discovery Kits, backpacks filled with the tools of a nature explorer, are available on loan to explore the Park. Since its opening, the Nature Observatory has been a great success, with approximately 2,000 visitors attending each weekend.

At The Charles A. Dana Discovery Center, the Conservancy expanded its art and nature family programs and performances through a four-year, $1.725 million matching grant from the Lila Wallace-Reader's Digest Fund as part of its Urban Parks Initiative, which is supporting the Conservancy's efforts to increase community involvement in public programs, especially in the Upper Park. Hundreds of families participated in nature-oriented photography, printmaking, sculpture, and painting workshops at the Dana Discovery Center. The Fund also enabled the Conservancy to create weekend family programs at the Nature Observatory that focus on the Park's natural habitats.

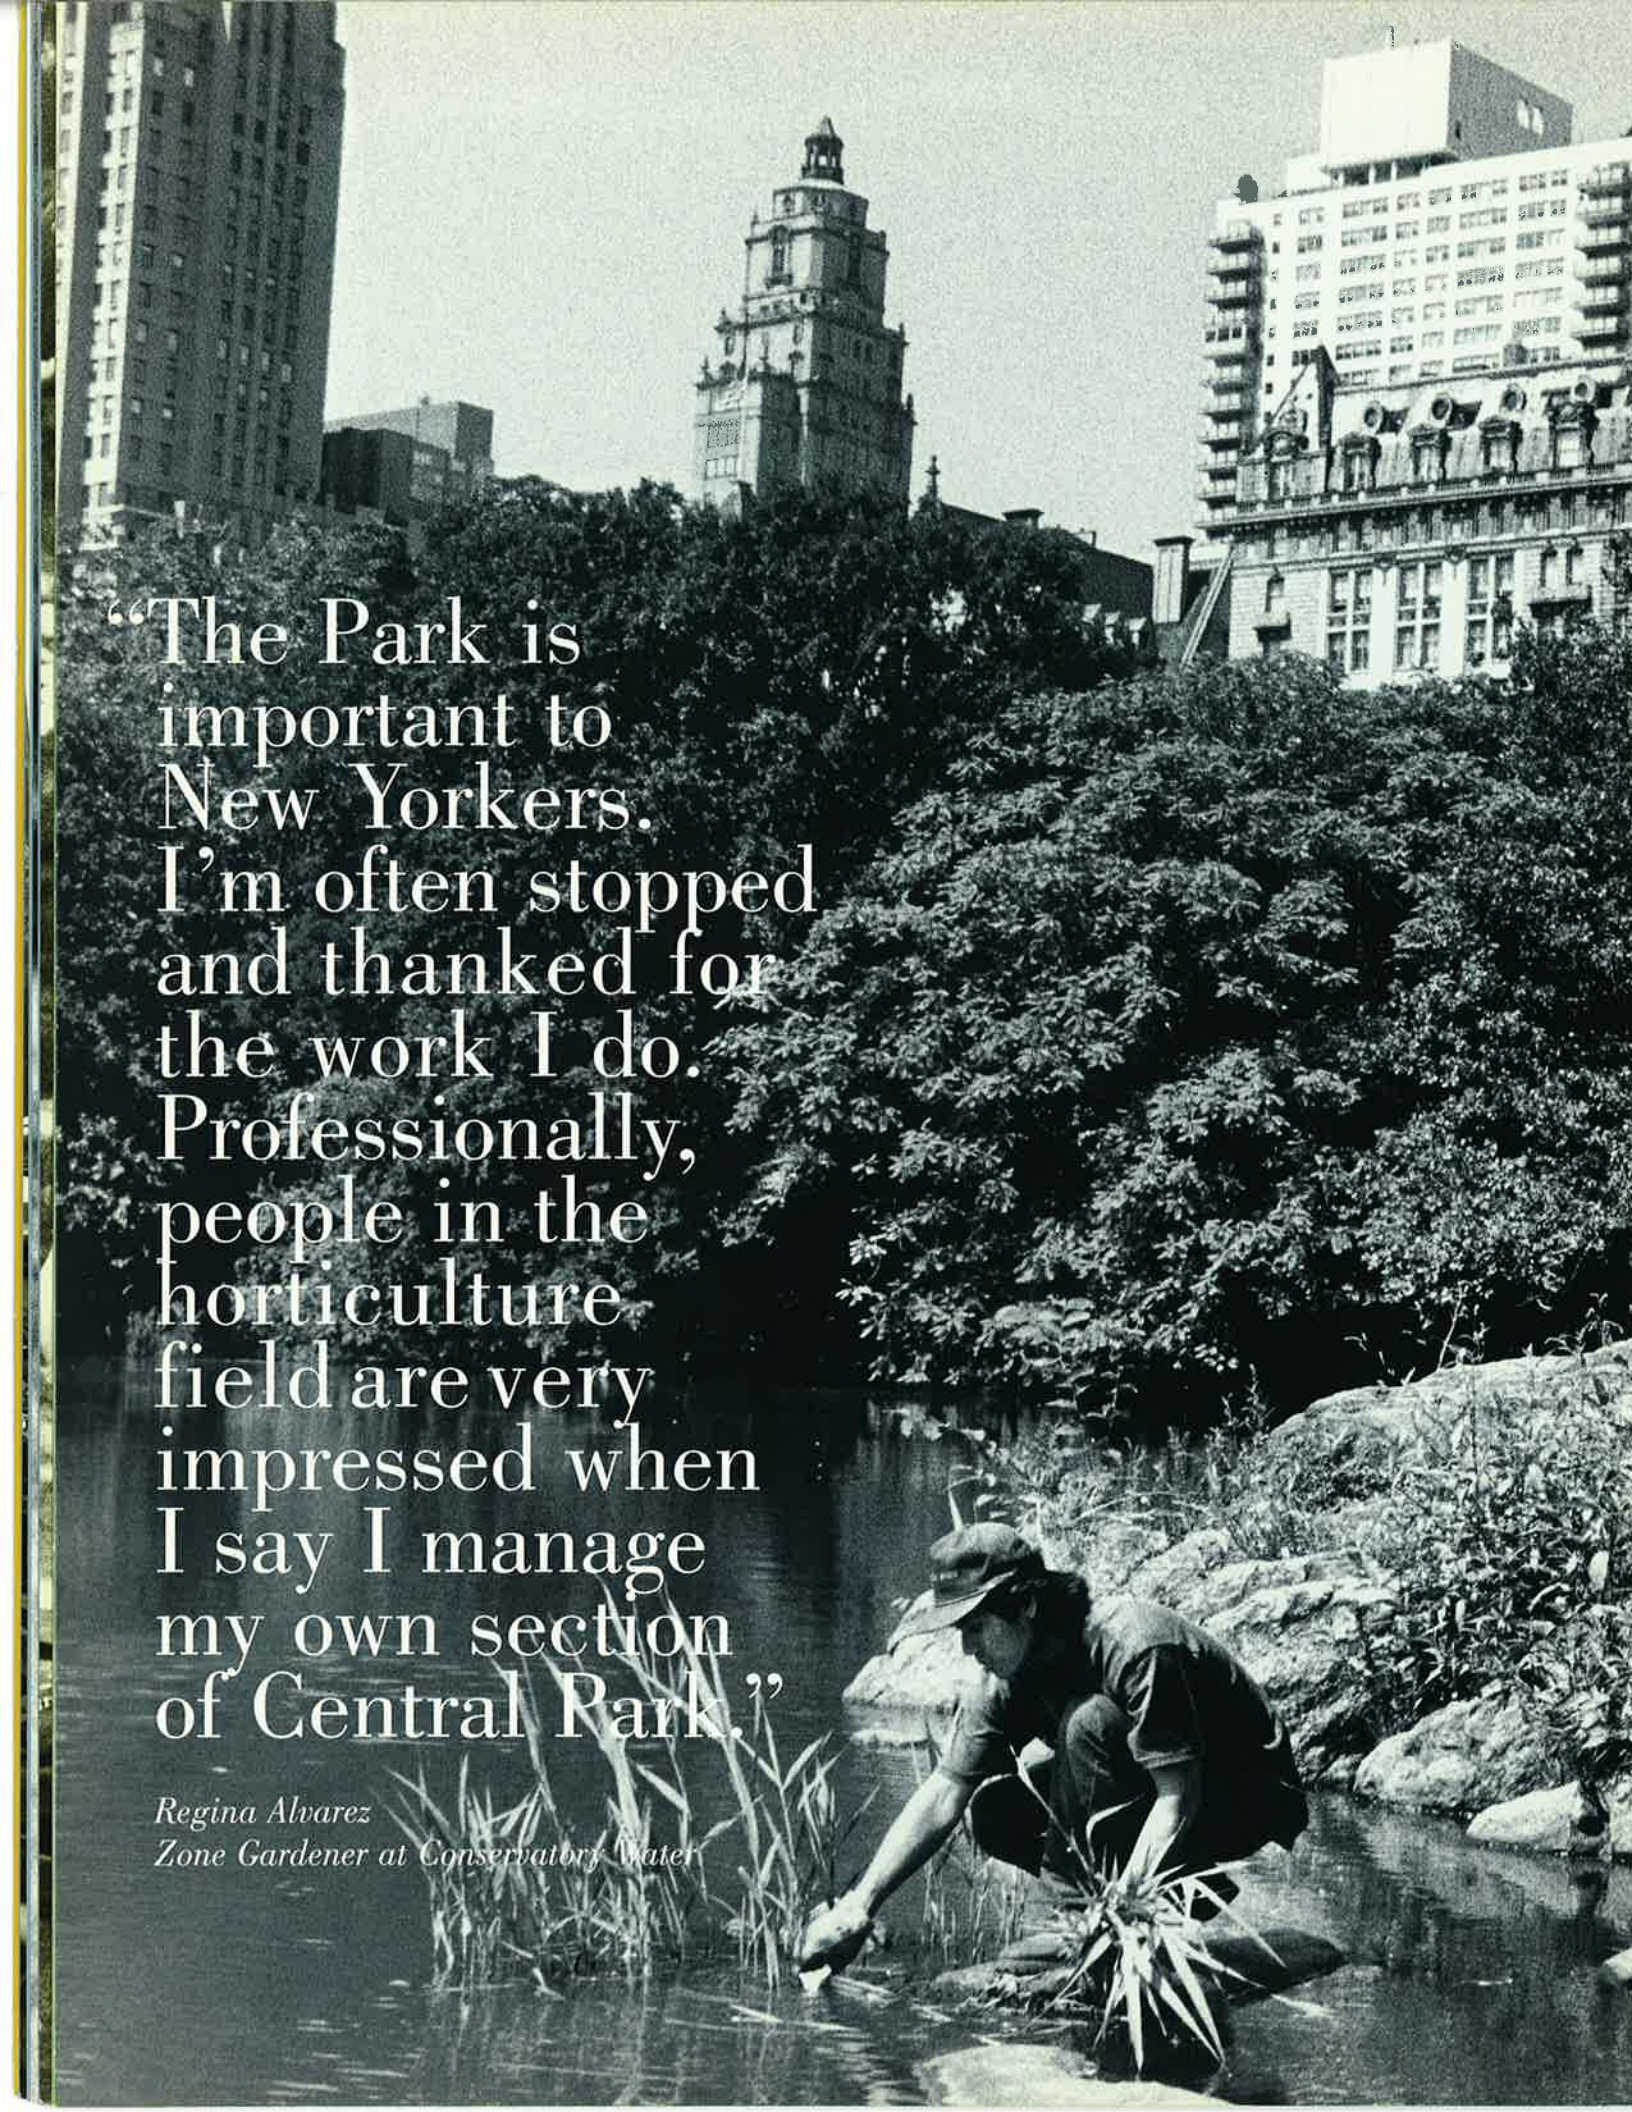

Other programs, supported by Upper Park Partners, continued to attract hundreds of community residents, including catch-and-release fishing at the Harlem Meer. Popular seasonal events such as the Harlem Meer Performance Festival, funded by Time Warner Cable of New York City, and the annual Halloween Great Pumpkin Sail also attracted large crowds.

This spring, the Conservancy converted the Dana Discovery Center's main-floor Discovery Room into a community gallery. Its first exhibition, Help Design Frederick Douglass Circle: An Exhibition of the Community Process, a collaboration with Cooper-Hewitt National Design Museum, presented designs for this important Harlem gateway created by teams of community residents and urban designers. Designs incorporated ideas for a memorial to the famed African-American Frederick Douglass, the Circle's namesake. The exhibition, the outcome of a community initiative organized by the Conservancy last year, was accompanied by a series of family workshops and symposia.

Conservancy education programs continued to serve the environmental education needs of New York City schools. This year, nearly 9,000 students from grades K-12 participated in one of the Conservancy's 16 field study programs, including Reading the Rocks, a new geology course where students explored the Park's rock outcroppings to learn about the Earth's geologic history. Conservancy teacher workshops included the Urban Woodland Ecology Series, featuring seminars by well-known environmental educators. Conservancy school partnership programs enabled students from the Elisabeth Irwin High School and the High School of Art and Design to learn the principles of landscape design, while students from the Beacon School studied ecology and the natural and social history of the Ramble. These educational initiatives were also made possible by the Luce Foundation grant and matching funds from individuals and institutional donors.

In addition to its role as an outdoor classroom, Central Park serves the recreational needs of thousands of community youth at the North Meadow Recreation Center. This year, the Conservancy expanded its programs—such as the innovative Central Park Challenge—which go beyond recreation to address such youth development issues as health and fitness, leadership and teamwork, and personal responsibility and self-esteem. To introduce corporations and their employees to the center and its recreation programs, the Conservancy held its first annual lawyers basketball fundraising tournament, spearheaded by Weil, Gotshal & Manges LLP, where law firms sponsored a youth tournament and participated in a tournament of their own.

“The Park is important to New Yorkers. I’m often stopped and thanked for the work I do. Professionally, people in the horticulture field are very impressed when I say I manage my own section of Central Park.”

Managing a Restored Central Park

Supporting its evolving role as manager and preserver of the restored Park, the Conservancy moved toward full implementation of its zone management system this year. The 843-acre Park is divided into 49 zones within seven sections. There are now 25 full-time, Conservancy-trained “zone gardeners” performing daily horticultural care and maintenance activities. This year Operations reallocated the Park maintenance staff to ensure that one person is assigned to each zone. Zone gardeners decide when to call in roving crews to repair benches or playground equipment, to remove graffiti, and to work with volunteers who assist in various facets of zone care. These front-line managers also are ambassadors to Park visitors, alerting the public to newly seeded lawns or other horticulturally sensitive areas.

Keeping structures, statues, and monuments clean and in good repair is important in itself. But more than keeping the Park beautiful, responsible maintenance sends a message to Park visitors and sets a standard for caring behavior. This year, Conservancy crews removed more than 58,000 square feet of graffiti within 48 hours of its appearance on buildings, benches, statues, and bridges. Conservancy monuments conservation crews continued restoration of such important statues as The Falconer and William Shakespeare. They also restored stonework at Belvedere Castle in preparation for the opening of the Henry Luce Nature Observatory. Workers skilled in rustic wood construction recreated a rustic wooden footbridge at Naturalists’ Walk and constructed 400 feet of rustic railing at Summit Rock. With the help of a second full-time maintenance worker funded by Playground Partners, the Conservancy replaced 118 swings. Playground Partners also made possible the restoration of benches in all Park playgrounds. A. Robert Towbin gave a generous gift to the Conservancy for the repair of the Park’s perimeter benches.

Funds raised by the Women’s Committee gave Conservancy workers an expanded network of point-to-point radios, enabling them to keep in contact with one another and with the Parks Enforcement Patrol and the Central Park Police Precinct. A generous donation by AT&T of cellular phones for similar purposes complements this network.

The Conservancy often must be prepared for extraordinary demands on its work force. Throughout the year, there are nearly 1,000 events, large and small. They range from the Metropolitan Opera and New York Philharmonic performances to crowds that spill over into the Park after many of the annual parades on Fifth Avenue. There are ad hoc performances that occur each weekend at Bethesda Terrace, Cherry Hill, and other areas. In 1996, the Conservancy managed logistics for more than 500 film and photo shoots as well. All of these events require clean-up and, often, restorative maintenance.

The past winter was one of the harshest in recent and distant memory. Frequent snow and ice storms made maintenance and horticultural work more difficult and took a significant toll, destroying 35 trees and severely damaging another 35. During the last severe ice storm in March, every plant and tree was encrusted with a half-inch of ice. Horticulture crews moved swiftly to remove fallen limbs from heavily laden trees to keep the Park safe for pedestrians and to prevent the spread of Dutch elm disease. Conservancy operations crews kept commuter pathways open and its equipment and vehicles up and running throughout this punishing winter.

Merchants' Gate

Work is in progress on a new destination for those looking for a respite from the heavily trafficked Columbus Circle. By Spring 1997, visitors can relax at a new sitting area under the shade of oak and maple trees, or view the restored Maine Monument by day or night at a new granite plaza with improved lighting.

6th & 7th Avenue

Restored this year, these entrances offer visitors direct routes to Heckscher Ballfields, the Carousel, and other popular destinations, as well as added amenities such as new benches, plantings, lighting, and drinking fountains.

Woodland Landscape

The Wonder of New York campaign is restoring the Park's western perimeter to the rustic woodland character originally envisioned by Olmsted and Vaux. The newly created Azalea Walk on the slopes south of Eaglevale Bridge captures this picturesque spirit, with an array of colorful azaleas, rhododendrons, and other native flora.

Belvedere

One of the new nature displays at the Henry Luce Nature Observatory is the magnificent second-floor tree loft, where visitors learn the basics of birdwatching at an oak tree canopy containing reproductions of a Red-tailed Hawk, a Downy Woodpecker, a Scarlet Tanager, and other birds that regularly visit or live in Central Park.

Great Lawn

The restoration of the Great Lawn is more than just installing 500,000 square feet of sod on the oval. Underneath the new lawn are 25,000 cubic yards of specially engineered topsoil, 13,500 linear feet of new drainage lines, and 11,000 linear feet of new irrigation lines with 275 pop-up sprinklers, all together making the new Lawn more advanced than many professional ballfields.

Conservatory Water

A prime example of the successful zone management program, a zone gardener works with a team of volunteers and roving crews to keep this popular Park destination in peak condition and to encourage stewardship. The zone gardener is also an ambassador to Park visitors, who flock to the area to sail model boats, play at the Hans Christian Andersen and Alice in Wonderland statues, or take in a meal or a boat ride at nearby Loeb Boathouse.

Cedar Hill

In one of many efforts to protect restored landscapes, the Conservancy initiated a flag system to manage this heavily used lawn. A popular place for dog walkers and sun bathers, red flags alert Park visitors to stay off the grass when it is most vulnerable, such as after a rainfall.

Help Design! Frederick Douglass Circle

A community initiative brought together residents, urban designers, and city officials to improve this important gateway to Harlem. Their designs, on view last spring at the Dana Discovery Center, included ideas for memorializing the African-American abolitionist Frederick Douglass. In one plan, the subway is a metaphor for the Underground Railroad with a skylight at the center of the Circle shedding light on commuters below.

Playground Partners

This active group of concerned parents has successfully expanded its outreach to families who live near the Park. In addition to community cleanups and popular fundraising parties, Playground Partners organized "coffee and conversation" events to welcome new mothers, and recruited captains to act as liaisons between the community and the playground crew in all 21 playgrounds.

Charles A. Dana Discovery Center

Through a grant from the Lila Wallace-Reader's Digest Fund, the Conservancy expanded its art and nature programs here and at Belvedere Castle to offer the public workshops based on Central Park themes. In one popular program at the Dana Discovery Center, families created handmade paper inspired by the colors, shapes, and textures found in nature.

Frederick Law Olmsted Awards Luncheon

In its 14th year, the Women's Committee's Luncheon raised an unprecedented $2.5 million. More than 1,000 New Yorkers gathered among the crabapple blossoms at the Conservatory Garden to honor Hilary Geary, Evelyne A. J. Hall, and Henry Luce III. Proceeds will fund a variety of Park needs, including the restoration of the W. 90th St. Playground.

CENTRAL PARK CONSERVANCY, INC.
Notes to Financial Statements

June 30, 1996 and 1995 (dollars in thousands)

1 ORGANIZATION

Central Park Conservancy, Inc. (the "Conservancy") is a not-for-profit organization incorporated under the laws of New York State and is a tax-exempt organization under the Internal Revenue Code.

The Conservancy is funded primarily from contributions made by individuals, corporations and foundations within the Metropolitan area. These contributions are used to fund major capital improvements, provide horticultural care and maintenance, and to offer programs for volunteers and visitors of Central Park.

2 SUMMARY OF SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

(a) Basis of Accounting

The accompanying financial statements have been prepared on the accrual basis.

(b) Basis of Presentation

Effective July 1, 1995, the Conservancy adopted the provisions of Statement of Financial Accounting Standards ("SFAS") No. 116, "Accounting for Contributions Received and Contributions Made," and SFAS No. 117, "Financial Statements of Not-for-Profit Organizations." The provisions of these new standards have been applied retroactively by restating 1995 financial statements.

Under these provisions, net assets and revenues, expenses, gains and losses are classified based on the existence or absence of donor-imposed restrictions. Accordingly, the net assets of the Conservancy and changes therein are classified and reported as follows:

Unrestricted net assets - Net assets that are not subject to donor-imposed stipulations.

Temporarily restricted net assets - Net assets subject to donor-imposed stipulations that may or will be met either by actions of the Conservancy and/or the passage of time.

Permanently restricted net assets - Net assets subject to donor-imposed stipulations that they be maintained permanently by the Conservancy. Generally, the donors of these assets permit the Conservancy to use all or part of the income earned on related investments for general or specific purposes.

Revenues, gains and other support are reported as increases in unrestricted net assets unless use of the related assets is limited by explicit donor-imposed restrictions or by law. Expenses are reported as decreases in unrestricted net assets. Gains and losses on investments and other assets or liabilities are reported as increases or decreases in unrestricted net assets unless their use is restricted by explicit donor stipulation or by law. Expirations of temporary restrictions on net assets (i.e., the donor-imposed stipulated purpose has been fulfilled and/or the stipulated time period has elapsed) are reported as net assets released from restrictions.

(c) Operations

The Conservancy includes in operations all expenses and unrestricted revenues, gains and other support (amounts released from restrictions), except for bequests and investment return on pooled investments in excess of the amount authorized for expenditure by the Board of Trustees, which are classified as designated for long-term investment.

(d) Contributions

Contributions, which include unconditional promises to give (pledges), are recognized as revenues in the period received. Conditional promises to give are not recognized until they become unconditional, that is when the conditions on which they depend are substantially met.

(e) Investments

The Conservancy carries its investments at fair value. Fair value is based on published market quotations. The cost basis for securities received through a gift is the fair value at the date of the gift.

(f) Furniture and Equipment

Furniture and equipment are recorded at cost and are depreciated using the straight-line method over their estimated useful lives. Maintenance and repairs are expensed as incurred.

(g) Statement of Cash Flows

The Conservancy classifies money market and mutual funds and U.S. Treasury instruments as investments.

(h) Use of Estimates

The preparation of financial statements in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the reported amounts of assets and liabilities and disclosure of contingent assets and liabilities at the date of the financial statements and the reported amounts of revenues and expenses during the reporting period. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

(i) Functional Allocation of Expenses

The costs of providing the various programs and other activities of the Conservancy have been summarized on a functional basis in the statements of activities. Accordingly, certain costs have been allocated among the programs and supporting services benefited.

3 INVESTMENTS

A summary of investments at June 30, 1996 and 1995 is as follows:

	1996		1995
	Cost	Fair value	Cost	Fair value
Money market and mutual funds	$ 1,906	1,906	1,572	1,572
Master demand notes	15,070	15,070	3,749	3,749
U.S. Treasury bonds and notes	8,704	9,512	8,021	9,215
U.S. Government agencies	751	789	890	934
Common stocks	9,821	14,756	6,584	8,009
	$ 36,252	42,033	20,816	23,479

The Conservancy maintains an investment pool for certain investments. The Conservancy's Board of Trustees has authorized a policy designed to preserve the value of these pooled investments in real terms (after inflation) and provide a predictable flow of funds to support operations. This policy permits the use of total return (interest, dividends and realized gains, net of investment management fees) on pooled assets at a rate (spending rate) of up to 6% of the market value of the portfolio at the beginning of the year. For fiscal years 1996 and 1995, the Conservancy limited its use of total return to 5%.

Investments held for long-term investment (endowments and funds functioning as endowments) are reflected in the three net asset classes at June 30, 1996 and 1995 as follows:

	1996	1995
Net asset classes:
Unrestricted -
designated for long-term investment	$ 3,820	2,400
Temporarily restricted	5,610	3,329
Permanently restricted	17,687	14,867
	$ 27,117	20,596

4 PLEDGES RECEIVABLE

Pledges receivable at June 30, 1996, primarily related to the restoration described below, are due to be collected as follows:

Year ending June 30	Amount
1997	$ 7,431
1998	4,957
1999	642
2000	113
2001	40
2002 and thereafter	220
	$ 13,403

The discount to present value is considered immaterial.

In February 1994, the Conservancy entered into a grant agreement with The Gilder Foundation ("Gilder") and the New York City Department of Parks and Recreation (DPR) for the purpose of restoring the Great Lawn and specific areas of the west side of Central Park. The parties are to contribute $17 million each, over the period 1994 to 1998, subject to the terms and conditions of the agreement. Funds are to be spent on projects as outlined in the agreement, and can be adjusted under the terms and conditions, provided that such adjustments do not materially change or delay total funding of the restoration and are approved in accordance with the agreement. As of June 30, 1996, each of the parties to the grant agreement have met their commitments toward the restoration. On behalf of each of the parties, the Conservancy has incurred approximately $18,300 of costs in connection with such restoration as of June 30, 1996.

The Conservancy has received a conditional pledge of $1,725 for public programs, of which $1,036 is outstanding at June 30, 1996. The pledge is contingent upon the Conservancy raising matching gifts through September 1999.

5 FURNITURE AND EQUIPMENT

A summary of furniture and equipment at June 30, 1996 and 1995 is as follows:

	1996	1995	Estimated useful lives
Furniture and fixtures	$ 119	111	5 to 10 years
Office equipment	813	538	5 to 10 years
	932	649
Less accumulated depreciation	448	345
	$ 484	304

6 TEMPORARILY RESTRICTED AND PERMANENTLY RESTRICTED NET ASSETS

Temporarily restricted net assets are available for the following purposes or periods at June 30, 1996 and 1995:

	1996	1995
Design and construction	$ 24,426	25,308
Horticulture, maintenance and operations	6,717	5,749
Public programs	2,591	2,352
Future periods	199	75
Balance at end of year	$ 33,933	33,484

Permanently restricted net assets are restricted to investment in perpetuity, the income from which is expendable to support the following purposes at June 30, 1996 and 1995:

	1996	1995
Horticulture, maintenance and operations	$ 12,753	10,651
Public programs	892	853
General purposes	4,042	3,363
	$ 17,687	14,867

7 NET ASSETS RELEASED FROM RESTRICTIONS

Net assets were released from donor restrictions by incurring expenses satisfying the restricted purposes specified by donors:

	1996	1995
Purpose restriction accomplished:
Design and construction	$ 7,923	6,712
Horticulture, maintenance and operations	2,557	2,123
Public programs and other	1,377	820
Administrative cost recovery	1,298	962
	$ 13,155	10,617

To the extent net assets released from restrictions (relative to investment return) exceed the Conservancy's Board approved spending rate, such amounts are designated for long-term investment.

8 LOAN PAYABLE

The Conservancy has available a $1,000 line of credit from Chase Manhattan Bank (the Bank). This line of credit includes a $300 sublimit for a standby letter of credit.

The line of credit is available for renewable one-year periods unless terminated by the Bank or the Conservancy. Interest will accrue at either the Bank's prime rate or at a fixed rate (based on money market) quoted by the Bank for 30, 60 or 90 days, at the borrower's option at the time of borrowing. No amounts are outstanding under this line of credit at June 30, 1996 and 1995, except with respect to the letter of credit as described in the following paragraph.

In 1996, the Conservancy entered into an agreement with the Commonwealth Fund whereby the Conservancy has available a four-year interest-free line of credit totaling $300, which is secured by a standby letter of credit from the Bank. At June 30, 1996, the Conservancy has $300 outstanding under this line of credit. The loan is payable on or before February 15, 2000.

9 RESTATEMENTS OF PRIOR YEAR AMOUNTS

As discussed in note 2, effective July 1, 1995, the Conservancy adopted the provisions of SFAS No. 116 and SFAS No. 117 and retroactively restated the previously issued 1995 financial statements to conform to the newly adopted accounting principles. The effect of these changes on the June 30, 1994 previously reported fund balances was as follows:

As previously classified	Net assets			Total
	Unrestricted	Temporarily restricted	Permanently restricted
Unrestricted fund balance	$ 177	-	-	177
Deferred pledge support	717	19,939	2,376	23,032
Deferred restricted support and revenue	-	3,942	-	3,942
Endowment - income unrestricted	679	-	1,242	1,921
Endowment - income restricted	369	1,627	9,254	11,250
Net assets at beginning of year, as restated	$ 1,942	25,508	12,872	40,322

The effect of the restatement on the increase in net assets in the 1995 statement of activities was to increase unrestricted net assets and temporarily restricted net assets by $933 and $8,000, respectively, and decrease permanently restricted net assets by $3,964.

10 CONTRIBUTED SERVICES AND FACILITIES

The Conservancy receives contributed services for legal advice as well as contributions for office space and utilities. The value of these services is recorded in the Conservancy's financial statements for the first time and is included as other revenue and allocated to functional expenses in the statement of activities in the amount of $582 and $546 in 1996 and 1995, respectively.

In addition, individuals have volunteered their time to the Conservancy. The value of these services is not included in the accompanying financial statements.

11 RETIREMENT PLAN

Effective July 1, 1987, the Conservancy established a defined contribution retirement plan (the "Plan") under Section 403(b) of the Internal Revenue Code. All employees with one year of service, as defined, are eligible to participate in the Plan. Participants may make voluntary contributions, subject to plan limitations, to be applied toward the purchase of retirement annuities. The Conservancy is obligated to match employee contributions up to a maximum of 5% of the employee's basic compensation, as defined. For the years ended June 30, 1996 and 1995, the Conservancy contributed $183 and $134, respectively, to the Plan on behalf of its employees. All contributions vest immediately.

12 FAIR VALUE OF FINANCIAL INSTRUMENTS

The carrying amount of cash, accounts receivable, accrued interest receivable and accounts payable and accrued expenses approximates fair value because of the short maturities of these financial instruments. The fair value of investments is based upon quoted market values as discussed in note 2.

The fair value of the loan payable is approximately $218 based on current market rates for loans with similar maturity and credit quality.

INDEPENDENT AUDITORS' REPORT

The Board of Trustees
Central Park Conservancy, Inc.:

We have audited the accompanying balance sheets of Central Park Conservancy, Inc. as of June 30, 1996 and 1995, and the related statements of activities and cash flows for the years then ended. These financial statements are the responsibility of the Conservancy's management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audits.

We conducted our audits in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audits provide a reasonable basis for our opinion.

In our opinion, the financial statements referred to above present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of Central Park Conservancy, Inc. as of June 30, 1996 and 1995, and the changes in its net assets and its cash flows for the years then ended in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles.

As discussed in note 2 to the financial statements, effective July 1, 1995, the Conservancy adopted the provisions of Statement of Financial Accounting Standards (SFAS) No. 116, "Accounting for Contributions Received and Contributions Made," and SFAS No. 117, "Financial Statements of Not-for-Profit Organizations." These standards were adopted on a retroactive basis and, accordingly, the 1995 financial statements have been restated.

MANAGEMENT REPORT

The Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB) issued pronouncements that have changed the content and presentation of financial statements for the not-for-profit industry. These standards are SFAS No. 116 "Accounting for Contributions Received and Contributions Made" and SFAS No. 117 "Financial Statements of Not-for-Profit Organizations." For the Conservancy, these pronouncements significantly affect our financial results and statement presentation in four important ways:

1 The traditional funds (unrestricted, restricted and endowment) are reclassified based upon legal or donor imposed restrictions into three new categories of net assets: unrestricted, temporarily restricted and permanently restricted. For example, in previous years the endowment fund included all principal and earnings set aside for endowment purposes. Now endowment funds are spread across the three net asset categories based upon the appropriate restrictions.

2 The endowment fund is reclassified as follows: Unrestricted principal and earnings are classified with other unrestricted funds. The principal of a restricted endowment is permanently restricted while its earnings may be either permanently or temporarily restricted. Footnote 3 of the financial statements provides a breakdown.

3 The reporting of pledges has also been modified. Previously, when a pledge was secured, it was recorded as an asset with an offsetting liability and was not recognized as income until it was actually paid. Now a pledge is recognized as income at the time it is secured. Thus, the FY-96 statements show contributions at a level lower than what might have been expected because many contributions paid in FY-96 were secured in FY-95 and prior.

4 The new statement format also obscures the matching of revenue and expenses. In the past, the unrestricted and restricted funds would report their respective revenues and matching expenses for the year. In the new format, revenue is reported as unrestricted or temporarily restricted as required, but all expenses are recorded as unrestricted. When these expenses satisfy restrictions, a matching amount of temporarily restricted net assets is transferred to unrestricted on a line separate and apart from contributions or other revenue labeled "Net assets released from restrictions."

Notwithstanding these changes in accounting and statement format, the Conservancy has benefited from a strong financial performance in FY-96. Conservancy spending on park restoration, maintenance and public programming is at an all time high, financial results from operations are favorable, and the endowment portfolio has experienced significant growth. The Conservancy's financial picture continues to be positive - a key factor in achieving our goals for protecting Central Park.

A tribute to Elizabeth Barlow Rogers

When Elizabeth Barlow Rogers founded the Central Park Conservancy, she embarked on a mission to restore the heart and lungs of New York City, and in the process made it a better place to live. She brought to her job an extensive knowledge of Central Park's natural and social history and a deep understanding of its vital role as an urban respite in the lives of New Yorkers.

Realizing the plight of the Park when graffiti covered nearly every surface, lawns were bare and eroded, and broken benches and vandalized lights dotted the landscape, Betsy rallied a small group of New Yorkers – which later grew to the tens of thousands – to restore Central Park to its Olmstedian splendor. In the process, she formed the first public-private partnership to manage an urban park, which today is a model for urban parks throughout the world.

By 2000, Betsy's vision of a restored Central Park will be a reality. And the Conservancy will focus its efforts on maintaining the legacy that she has left to all New Yorkers. Who would want to think of New York City without Central Park? Thanks to Betsy, we don't have to. Thanks to her, this urban oasis, this precious landmark, will be a beautiful retreat for generations of New Yorkers to come. We wish Betsy great success in her continuing endeavors to make New York City a more livable place.
